

PENGUIN BOOKS

RUN, REBEL

This uncorrected advance proof is made available on a confidential basis and may not be sold or otherwise circulated. The appearance and contents of this proof may not resemble the finished book and under no circumstances may it or any of its contents be reproduced before publication of the finished book without the publisher's consent.

For Joe
and
all the women and girls who dare to rebel.

PENGUIN BOOKS

UK | USA | Canada | Ireland | Australia
India | New Zealand | South Africa

Penguin Books is part of the Penguin Random House group of companies whose addresses can be found at global.penguinrandomhouse.com.

www.penguin.co.uk
www.puffin.co.uk
www.ladybird.co.uk

Penguin
Random House
UK

First published 2020
<Other publishing history if applicable>

001

Text copyright © Manjeet Mann, 2020

The moral right of the author has been asserted

Text design by Janene Spencer Printed and bound in Great Britain by Clays Ltd, Elcograf S.p.A.

A CIP catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN: 978-0-241-41142-1

All correspondence to:
Penguin Books
Penguin Random House Children's 80 Strand, London WC2R 0RL

Penguin Random House is committed to a sustainable future for our business, our readers and our planet. This book is made from Forest Stewardship Council® certified paper.

RUN

REBEL

Manjeet Mann

PENGUIN BOOKS

PROLOGUE

A wound.
Triggered
by a beating.

It grew.
Thriving
on neglect.

It swelled.
Flourishing
on her spine.

When ripe, a clotted
blister.

It.
Crippled.
Her.

Weighing down
on her too-small frame

for her adolescent age.

My. Mother.
Sat
hunchback,

working.

Silent.

Ignored and ignoring pins of prickly pain pulsing.

What's wrong with your daughter?
a neighbour asked.

*She's not sitting or standing upright?
It's been weeks.*

My grandmother
looked at my mother

as if she were observing her
for the first time.

My grandmother

fell to the floor.

*Crumpled like a sheet falling from a washing line,
my mother tells me.*

Slumped
on the back
of a motorbike,

my mother travelled
along dusty dirt tracks,
through several Indian villages

to the nearest hospital.
The poison
drained.

The rotten flesh
carved,
 gouged,
 burrowed
 out.

My mother
concealed her anger.

Her mother
showed no
remorse.

The wound –
now
a scar.

The size
of a fist.

A crater buried between shoulder blades.

*It is the curse of being a girl,
my mother tells me.*

*You are the property of your parents, husband, brothers.
You endure,
never question it.*

I question it.

ONE RESTLESS

ANATOMY OF A REVOLUTION STAGE 1

People feel restless.
Held down by restrictions,
forced to accept less.

Preparing to fight,
accepting all
they will lose.

BOUND

Built-in fear
of our families,
the community,
we are Observed
through the gaze of others.
Socialized into tracking each other.
Friends, neighbours, family.

*Is she where she should be?
Should she be out this late?
Who is that she's walking with?*

Watching.
Monitoring

and dying to get out.

I AM 1

Bewakoof.
The Punjabi word for stupid.

I.
Am.
Stupid.

Nikame.
The Punjabi word for useless.

I.
Am.
Useless.

My name is Amber Rai.

Amber.
The stone of courage.

The soul of a tiger.

Rai,
from the Sanskrit raja.
A title of honour.

A leader.
A king.
A chief.

But
at home

I am
stupid
and I am
useless.

BURDEN

No one wanted my mother.
No one wanted her mother,
and no one wanted her mother.

It goes on and on now and way back then.

No one wanted Ruby.
No one wanted me.

My sister Ruby and I have heard
the stories.

The sadness that cloaked
our births.

The prayers
and temple visits, wishing,

wishing
we would come out
as boys.

So we are born in all our feminine form

and reminded of our burden

every day.

We are obedient.
We are small.
We are quiet.

To prove
we are not a burden.

We are still reminded that we are a
burden.

It eats away at you.

CONFUSED

If girls are never wanted,
how do you expect to get your precious little boy?

MY VOICE

No matter how small or quiet I am expected to be,
I find my voice on the running track. It's where I'm truly alive.

Words boomerang from trainer to tarmac. Creating ripples in every corner of my body until all knock-downs, run-ins, face-offs and scraps

have been twisted wrung exhausted

up

up

and released up into the clouds and sky above.

DREAMS

So simple. To run.
A professional athlete.
It's a stupid dream.

Ruby's dreams were crushed.
She was overpowered, tamed.
She chose not to fight.

Mum must have had dreams.
She's never spoken of them.
Must be too painful.

Dad sleep-talks his dreams.
They keep us awake at night.
Dreams trapped in nightmares.

PREDICTION

Home
is not where my heart is.

Freedom
usually comes at a price.

I am restless,
my feet
need to fly.

It's only
a matter
of time.

Correction.

I fear
it's only
a matter

of time.

FIRST DAY BACK

I leave for school earlier than usual.
Meeting with Tara and David at our secret place.

My stomach doing flips holding in – excitement.
Not seeing them over the summer makes holidays – unbearable.

Correction.

Not seeing David over the summer makes holidays
HELL ON EARTH.

I turn out of my estate, take in the tree-lined street that surrounds me and leave the looming high-rises behind.

THE ESTATE

Palm Wood Estate
is one of the roughest
and biggest estates
in the country.

Streets in the sky dreams turned to sinkhole nightmares.

THE GRASS IS GREENER

I stride past
the bookies,
the chippy,
the newsagent's.

Get to our secret place – quicker.
See Tara and David – sooner.

Turn on to streets that enjoy sky and
green spaces.
Breathe air that suggests it's cleaner,

pass houses that promise better futures and shops that

promise healthier
hearts and minds,
as the eyes of the high-rises

fade

into the distance.

OUR SECRET PLACE

St Martin's Church
dominates the skyline.
A thing of beauty
in a place that has been 'voted'

Britain's

worst town.
Unhealthiest town.
Grimmest town.
And – the latest –
most deprived town.

An unfair review
of a town that's split in two.
St Martin's stands
at the divide

between council tenants
and homeowners.
Between the unemployed
and the employed.

A divided town
where prosperity
and poverty
are neighbours.
A postcode lottery
cementing futures.

At St Martin's
none of that matters.
It's neutral, it's beautiful,
it's safe.

A ROOM WITH A VIEW

If I stand on the toilet in our house and look out of the bathroom window,
I can see it.

Ruby and I would rush to tiptoe-peek out of the window when the church bells rang on a Sunday morning.

In religious studies we were told the spiritual weight of a church bell could drive away 'evil spirits' and storms.

Hypnotized by the melodic chimes, we stood transfixed.
Our toes numbing on the cold plastic rim as we prayed the bells would drive away the tempest that engulfed our own home.

SECRET CORNERS

St Martin's has many hidden places concealed by oversized gravestones.

I head towards our secluded corner, screened in on three sides and camouflaged by a giant oak.

I can hear their voices. I poke my head round.
Tara squeals and jumps up and down.

AmberAmberAmber!

She grabs me and gives me
the biggest squeeze ever.

I've missed your beautiful face!

Tara is the only person who calls me beautiful.
I try and believe it.

David holds out his arms.

Sister from another mister,
come here!

He gives me an almighty hug, which makes my heart do a little flip.

Bro-ther f-rom a-n-oth-er mo-th-er!

I can barely get the words out, David's embrace is so tight.
He smells of strawberry chewing gum and Lynx.

I take a moment to try and breathe him in and sink into his shoulder.

Being with these two grounds me
like the giant oak that shields us.

I feel rooted and protected as he stands in front of me, his hands still on my arms, grinning, chewing and smelling great.

He looks different. Slightly more tanned, streaks of blond in his dark hair.

His eyes wider, his lashes longer.

He looks way hotter than I remember him six weeks ago.
Waaaaaay hotter. I didn't think that was even possible.

Hot,
I say.

Not in my head but out loud.

What?

Tara, staring at me, staring at David for way too long.

Hmmm?
Nothing.
I'm just hot.
Are you hot?
I'm really hot.