

The background of the cover is a watercolor illustration. It features two rolling green hills. On the left hill, there is a tree with a dark, textured trunk and a large, soft pink canopy. At its base are several small red flowers. On the right hill, there is a smaller tree with a similar pink canopy and red flowers at its base. The sky is a light blue with soft, white watercolor clouds. The title 'The Fun We Had' is written in a large, dark, cursive script across the top of the sky.

Once upon a springtime,
I went to Nana's bed.

She hugged me tight and kissed me,
then took my hand and said:

"Remember our adventure,
that time we went away,
When we camped out by the blossom trees
and played outside all day?"

I said: "I do remember!
We made that paper boat.
We sailed it on the river,
and we watched it dip and float."

After we remembered,
Nana had to rest her head.
She was feeling very weary,
so I sat with her and said:

“Would it make you better
if I sang to you awhile?”

“You can’t make me better,
but you always make me smile.”
