Chapter One

Snowfall

It was Christmas Eve, and the Christmas Dolls, Clara and Star, were in the Cupcake Café, in their favourite spot next to the fire.

Star was deep in her book, Magical Creatures of Lapland, while Clara was checking over her Christmas planning list.

“Oh, just look at Santa’s reindeer,” said Star, holding up the illustration for Clara to see. “If I had a Christmas wish, it would be to ride on one of Santa’s reindeer.”

Clara smiled. “My wish would be for everything to go perfectly at Madame Coco’s Christmas party tonight.”

“I’m sure that wish will come true!” said Star. “You’ve put so much work into the party.”

“Thank you,” said Clara. “I really hope so.” She glanced down at her watch. “I wonder where Robin could be? I’m sure we said we’d meet here at eleven.”

“I expect he’s checking on the bird feeders,” said Star. “After that hard frost last night, he probably wants to make sure the birds have got enough food to last them through the day.”

Even as she spoke, the café door burst open and in came Robin, a huge smile on his face.

“Sorry I’m late!” he said. “I was topping up the bird feeders with nuts and seeds. Have you seen outside? It’s just started snowing.”

The Christmas Dolls rushed to the window, their faces full of wonder as they watched the gentle drifts of snow falling from the sky.

“Oh! How magical!” said Clara, clapping her hands as the fat flakes began to settle on the tops of the houses.

“We’ll be able to build snowmen.
And have a white Christmas!”

“Just think,” added Robin, “right now Santa’s elves will be hard at work, finishing off the last of the Christmas toys...”

“...and tonight,” finished Star, “Santa and his reindeer will be racing across the sky.”

Robin grinned back at her.
“I’m definitely starting to feel Christmassy!” he said.

“This should help keep up your Christmas spirits,” said Maya, the Cupcake Café owner, coming over to their table. She was holding a tray, brimming with festive food. There were three hot chocolates, swirling with marshmallows and frothy cream, and a delicious array of buns and pastries.

“I’ve brought some of our Christmas treats for you to try,” Maya went on. “We’ve got cinnamon swirls, iced cranberry muffins and our homemade mince pies.”

“Yum,” said Clara, breathing in the scent of freshly baked buns.

Once they were settled,
Clara opened up her notebook.
“Right!” she said. “Shall we begin our meeting?” She turned to Robin. “How are the Dolly Town Christmas decorations coming along?”

“There’s a wreath on every door,” said Robin, “and boughs
of holly dotted around town,
along with sprigs of mistletoe.
I checked the Dolly Town

Christmas tree too, just in case any of the baubles had blown off in last night’s wind, and everything’s still in place.”

“Excellent,” said Clara.
“And what about the lights?”

“All done,” said Star. “As soon as it gets dark, Dolly Town will be sparkling like the night sky.
There’s a special surprise waiting for everyone at Madame Coco’s too.”

“So now we just have the Christmas party to look forward to,” said Clara. “I’ve helped Madame Coco organize the food and the music and we’ve sent out all the invitations. Everyone in Dolly Town will be there. I can’t wait!”

watches began to flash. Quickly, Clara pressed the flashing symbol on her screen.

“Are you there, Christmas Dolls?” said Mission Control.

“We’re all here, Mission Control,” Clara replied. “What’s happened?”

There’s a Christmas
EMERGENCY

in Lapland. Someone has broken into Santa’s Workshop and ALL the presents have been stolen! The elves have been working so hard to get everything ready, and now the presents have all gone.

“But that’s terrible,” said Robin.
“Who would do such a thing?”

“The elves don’t know who it could be,” Mission Control continued. “But it’s Christmas Eve – they’ll never be able to make new presents in time for Christmas Day. They must find the presents before sunset, or Christmas will be ruined. Will you help?”

“Of course,” said Star. “We’ll do everything we can.”

“Thank you, Christmas Dolls,”

said Mission Control. “Sending through the mission details now.”

Clara picked up her sparkly-cased screen, just as the mission details flashed up.

To Lapland

The Christmas Dolls gathered their coats and bags, then hurried out onto the streets. Already, a thin layer of snow lay over Dolly Town, like a sprinkling of sugar.
